

Peter Auricchio, trumpet, is an active performer and teacher in the New York area. Over the course of his more than twenty-year career, Peter has performed in forty-nine of the fifty United States, as well as internationally, across two continents. He has presented masterclasses at major universities, appeared live on both television and radio, collaborated on several recording projects and toured nationally with brass chamber ensembles and Broadway shows.

Dr. Auricchio received his Doctor of Musical Arts degree from Stony Brook University in 2022. He earned his Bachelor of Music degree in Brass Performance from the Boston University College of Fine Arts in 2003 and his Master of Music degree in Brass Performance from The University of Denver in 2007. His principal teachers include Kevin Cobb, Alan Hood, Terry Everson, Ethan Bendorf, Don Downs and the late, Mike Carubia.